

INSTRUCTORS

Dr. Iris K. Stovall, Programme Coordinator of the University of Illinois UI-Online, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, USA, received her doctorate degree from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and has been very active throughout her career in effectively incorporating computers for teaching. Dr. Stovall has participated in numerous faculty awareness and training workshops organized by the UNESCO Cairo Office since the early 90's. The Illinois Online Network, under the leadership of Dr. Iris Stovall, has been awarded the 2002 Sloan Consortium award for Excellence in ALN Faculty Development "In recognition of an exemplary faculty professional initiative that has significantly improved online teaching and learning in higher education through Illinois".

Kevin E. Johnson, Kevin's interest in technology began when he was 14. He spent hours teaching himself to program, which later led to a programming position with the University of Illinois. He spent three years working with the Computer Adaptive Testing and Measurement team developing online study materials for domestic and international audiences.

For the past ten years, he has developed curriculum and taught in both academic and corporate environments. Kevin has taught multiple subjects, a majority of which were centered on technology. He has his Master of Education degree from the University of Illinois and has participated in the Online Teaching and Learning Program at California State University – Chico. Kevin joined the ION team in January of 2005 as an Instructional Designer where he supports online instructors, as well as teaches college and university professors the pedagogical values of online instruction.
